CANDIDATES FOR COUNCIL

Are Off In a Bunch For Votes In The Primary.

RACES IN TWO WARDS.

Four Old Board Members Candidates, Three Without Opposition.

City politics is beginning to take definite shape and several contests are under way. The vacancy in the Second ward has brought out a contest between Messrs. M. C. Forbes and Jno. B. Galbreath, both former councilmen. This race bids fair to be a hard fought one.

In the First ward Councilman J. Miller Clark is a candidate for re-election and is opposed by Mr. E. H. Higgins, the young druggist. Each of these young men has a strong following and there is already some lively campaigning in the ward.

Councilmen L. H. Davis in the fourth and E. H. Armstrong in the Seventh are candidates for re-election, and so far have no opposition. The same may be said of E. W. Glass, the Republican member in the Fifth ward.

The retirement of Councilmen J. K. Twyman in the Third, and J. B. Jackson in the Sixth, two excellent members who have served several years, will bring out new men in those wards. Mr. Geo. E. Randle in the Sixth and Mr. M. H. Carroll in the Third, are already announced and have developed such strength that they are not likely to be opposed. They have no opposition at this time.

Various announcements appear in this paper.

TWENTY MEMBERS

Present at the June Meeting of the Athenaeum.

The June meeting of the Athenaeum was held at Hotel Latham Thursday night from 8 to 11 o'clock, with 30 of the 28 members present. The program consisted of three papers.

Chas. M. Meacham read a paper on "Heroism," a historical discussion of many of those who have distinguished themselves by personal valor in all ages of the world, concluding with examples of the "unknown heroes" in every day life who are receiving Carnegie medals for heroism.

Mr. B. G. Nelson discussed "The World of Pastime," treating of the necessity for recreation and making a strong plea for a public park.

Dr. W. L. Nourse wrote on "Souls vs. Hands," his paper being a thoughtful and very profound discussion of the spirit of unrest that is abroad in the world today.

All of the papers were discussed in short talks, nearly all present taking part. The club will not meet again until September.

U. D. C. Meeting.

The Daughters of the Confederacy will meet at 3:30 o'clock to-day, at Hotel Latham.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MR. SKERRITT

An Overdose of Laudanum to Relieve Pain Caused Death.

WAS IN HIS 61st YEAR.

Burial at Riverside Cemetery To-day at 10 O'Clock.

Mr. Curtis H. Skerritt, the liveryman, died Thursday evening at six o'clock, from an overdose of laudanum taken to relieve a cramp in his stomach about nine o'clock that morning. He went home from his stable sick and soon afterwards became so ill that Mrs. Skerritt telephoned for Dr. Jackson and for his nephew, young Dorris, who came and put him to bed. The doctor found him sleeping, but seemingly in no bad condition. At that time it was not known that he had taken the medicine. About two o'clock he roused up and seemed much better, but at four o'clock he grew worse and Dr. R. L. Woodard was called in and worked with him for two hours, but he continued to sink until he died. Dr. Woodard found the bottle from which he had taken the medicine, but as it was not full he could not tell how much he had swallowed.

Mr. Skerritt was 61 years of age and had long been engaged in the transfer business and more recently bought a livery stable. The deceased was raised in Hopkinsville. He was of a retiring disposition, was well known as a man who never interfered with other people's affairs and had many close friends. He is survived by his wife and one daughter, Mrs. Fred Snyder, of Decatur, Ind., and one brother, Harry Skerritt, of this city.

Funeral services at residence this morning at 10 o'clock, conducted by Dr. H. D. Smith. Interment in Riverside cemetery.

HOME PHONE

Will Soon Connect Pembroke With Hopkinsville.

Last week the Home Telephone Co., through its representative, F. G. Hoge, bought a 20-year franchise to open an exchange at Pembroke. Work of putting up poles and stringing wires will be commenced as soon as possible. When the work is finished Hopkinsville will be in direct communication with Pembroke, which is very much needed, as the Cumberland is, so far as we are able to say, over crowded with Pembroke calls. Pembroke will also have connection with Elkton, Allensville and Trenton as well as all over Christian county.

Radford-Manson.

Maj. Cyrus S. Radford, U. S. N., has arrived in the city and his marriage to Miss Catherine Manson will take place at 10:30 next Wednesday morning at the home of Dr. and Mrs. M. W. Williams. The ceremony will be performed by Dr. W. L. Nourse. Miss Mary Bronaugh gave a dinner last evening in honor of Miss Manson, and Mrs. Gordon Nelson will entertain in her honor to-day.

At Hill's Chapel.

A series of gospel meetings will be held at Hill's Chapel, beginning next Sunday. Evangelist N. A. Jones will do the preaching and the singing will be under the direction of W. H. Allen. Services every evening promptly at 7:45.

D. A. R. Meeting.

The Daughters of the Revolution will meet at Hotel Latham Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

DAMAGE SUIT CASE.

Finally Disposed of By Court of Appeals.

A case of considerable interest in court circles was finally settled by the court of appeals this week. It was a case that had been tried in the lower court five times in a many years. The initial trial was begun when John H. Bell, Jr., brought suit to recover a claim, as we understand it, against J. P. Thompson, by attaching tobacco belonging to Mr. Thompson, a judgment having been rendered in favor of Mr. Bell in the circuit court. Mr. Thompson then instituted a suit against Mr. Bell for damages and obtained a judgment for $350.

Mr. Bell's attorneys, Messrs. Landes & Stites, took an appeal. Every contention for the appellee, we learn was sustained in the higher court. The Court of Appeals decided the original plaintiff had no cause for action and ordered the case stricken from the circuit court docket, thus settling far all time a case that has been on hand for five years and consumed a great deal of time and at considerable cost to both parties.

BOND SALE A FAILURE.

The Fiscal Court Fails to Make Satisfactory Deal.

ANOTHER SALE SOON.

Bidders Refuse to Comply With Some of the Conditions.

The Commissioners appointed to negotiate the Bond Sale for the Fiscal Court failed to make a satisfactory sale with the Chicago bidders and there will have to be another sale advertised, which will be done without delay. An effort was made to come to terms with Mr. Rountree, representing the second highest bidder, after N. W. Halsey & Co. had failed to close the trade.

Berries

Extra Fancy Ones TO-DAY.

Mr. Keeling is certainly sustaining his reputation of having the finest, best assorted and most elegant flavored berries that come to this market. We can furnish several different grades. Let us have your order. What about daily supply?

THE DAY OF HIS FAILURE

By MARY KATHERINE REZLY.

Of course the whole thing got into the papers soon enough. Things always do. But we in the office knew what was coming long before outsiders did. We could see how things were going, and we knew that, sooner or later, the boss would go to the wall.

You see, Mr. Carrington, the boss, had inherited the mills from his father and he had a sort of family pride in running them in the same way his father had before him. And George says old-fashioned business methods don't hold to-day. Maybe he and the rest of them are right. I don't know. I've been working in the office for a good many years, and I think I know more about the run of business affairs than most ordinary girls, but there are some things even I can't discuss intelligently.

So it is just the part of the affair that I saw from my place in the inner office that I can tell about, and I guess that part is worth more than all the stuff the papers printed after all. At least, it meant more to the boss.

For it wasn't just the crash that was sure to come in his business that the boss had to face. He had troubles of his own outside of that. Nobody knew what the matter was exactly, or why his wife had left him, or where she was; but every one knew that she was gone, and that the big house on the hill had been shut up for months. Some of the girls said she was in Europe somewhere, and some said she had gone out to California, but Mamie Gaffery always declared she was in Sioux Falls waiting for a South Dakota divorce.

She had been a poor girl when he had married her, but she was young and pretty and he was very much in love with her. They had been devoted to each other at first, but after a year they were hardly on speaking terms, and he spent most of his time at the club when he was away from the office. Then before another year had gone, she had left him and no one knew where she was. Maybe Mamie was right.

Some of the girls said he had grown tired of her, and that he had neglected her for his business, and that the trouble had started that way. But Mamie Gaffery shook that silly head of hers, and said she would bet anything there was another woman in it. "The men are all alike, anyway," she said. "And the boss is no better than the rest."

Mamie thinks she knows a lot. Just because George never looked at her after I came to the office—but that's my story, not the boss's.

Anyway I knew there was no truth in that. The boss isn't that kind. I haven't seen him and worked for him every day for two years without getting a pretty good idea of the kind of man he is. I had worked for the other kind before I came to him and I know the difference.

The girls said, too, that he didn't care at all. "The old icicle," said Mamie Gaffery. "He hasn't a bit of feeling. I don't blame her for leaving him."

But I knew that was not true. The boss did care and I knew it. I saw more of him than the others did. He could put on that cold, icy air of his when people were around, but there were times in his office, when I knew he forgot me and forgot himself to be. He would stop in the middle of a sentence he was dictating, and sit there with his face drawn and white and his eyes staring straight at nothing. Maybe my head is full of sentimental ideas, but I was sure it was not the business he was thinking of.

It was the last day. The mills had already closed down, and all the world knew that the boss had failed. We had been paid off the Saturday night before. I guess we all felt rather mean about taking it. At least I did. Anyway to show how we all felt towards the boss we reported for work the next Monday morning. That is, all of us except Mamie Gaffery. She said she had to look out for No. 1, and took herself off to find another job. But the rest of us were on hand, ready to stick by the boss to the end, or at least as long as we could be of any use to him.

I worked in the private office all morning. Mr. Carrington had a lot of dictating to do, and just before noon as I was finishing a letter for him he stopped me.

"You will be looking for a new place next week, I suppose, Miss Morriey," he said. "I don't know that my work is worth much now, but you have done good work for me for two years, and if I can say anything that will help find you another position I want to say it."

I don't know why I told him. Mr. Carrington is not the kind of a person you would get confidential with, but there was something so kind in his voice and in his eyes when he looked at me, that after I had thanked him as well as I could, I just out and said: "You see it is this way, Mr. Carrington, George has a good position offered him as soon as he is through here, and he thinks we—well and he thinks I better not take another place."

I blushed like a silly when I said it, of course. You see it was the first time I had told anyone how it was with George and me.

Then the boss did a queer thing. He held out his hand to me and "Richard!" She said at last, with a little gasp.

"I'm glad, Miss Morriey, glad for you and for George. You both deserve happiness and I hope you will find it. It is the only thing in the world worth having, and when it is gone a man can lose all the rest of the world, and it will not matter."

He stopped abruptly and turned away from me, but I should read the pain in his face. He walked to the window and stood looking out. I wished there was something I could say to him, but of course there was not, so I went out of the room and left him alone.

I went out to lunch with George that noon, and when we came back I stood outside the office door talking to him for a minute before I went in to my work. I had my hand on the door just ready to go in, when a woman came into the room. She gave one swift look around at the others working there, and then came straight up to us.

"I must see Mr. Carrington," she said.

"I am afraid—" George began.

"Is he in?" she asked.

"Yes, he is in—" George's tone was uncertain.

"But he can't see anyone," I put in to help him out.

"I must see him," she said looking right at me. She was not any taller than I, I am sure. But, oh! the haughty way she had with her! And when she looked at me, I don't know why, but I just had to give in.

"I will speak to Mr. Carrington," I said.

He was sitting in his office chair with his head bowed on the desk in front of him.

"Mr. Carrington," I began. Then I was aware that the woman had passed George and had followed me into the room.

He lifted his head and turned slowly around in his chair. He glanced first at me, and then looked at the woman behind me.

I turned too. I don't know what had become of the dignity which had awed me before. She was standing with her back to the door, half crouching against it. One gloved hand was clenched tightly and pressed against her lips, and her big eyes were looking at him like those of a frightened child who had done wrong and was appealing for mercy.

I don't know how long they stood that way. He in his office chair, staring coldly at her, and she with her back to the door, looking at him with her lovely face full of fear and pleading, and of something else I could not read then.

"Richard," she said at last with a little gasp, then "Richard," again and stopped.

He made no more answer to her.

Then she drew herself up and began speaking very fast. "I had to come, Richard. I can't help what you think of me. I could not stay away after I heard—even if you do not care for me now as you once did, if you will only let me stay and help you now—"

"You forget, Alice," he interrupted her in a voice so cold it chilled even me—and the woman standing there, I could see that she turned pale at the sound of it. "You forget, or do not seem to understand. I am a poor man, there is nothing to come back to."

"But that is why I came," she said. "Don't you see? That is why I came. Your money! Did it ever make us happy? And now that it is gone—Oh, what do you know of being poor, you who have had wealth all your life? But I know, and if you would only let me, I could help you."

"But," and she drew herself up with the old haughty air. "If you do not want me—"

He has risen to his feet and was standing clutching the edge of the desk for support. I think she saw for the first time how the long strain had told on him.

"Want you, Alice," he said. "When have I ever wanted anything else?"

He would have gone to her, but, with a little sobbing cry, she crossed the room to him and pushed him gently back into his chair, then slipped down on the floor beside him.

I saw her head sink down on his knees, and his arms close around her. Then I left the room and closed the door quickly behind me, so that those outside could not see.

BOUGHT THEIR OWN BEDS

Old Traveler Tells of Methods in Sleeping Car Twenty-Five Years Ago—Glad to Rest on Straw.

The old man stood at the window a moment looking at the clock. "Twenty-five years ago," he said, "I bought a berth from Kansas City to California. My bed cost me 75 cents."

The clerk looked astounded. "You're mistaken, I think," replied the ticket seller. "Berths are as cheap now as they have ever been."

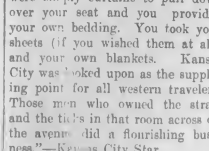

"No," said the traveler, "they are not. They're costlier. And I'll tell you why. Travel nowadays is different. When I went to California then I paid 75 cents for a straw tick. I bought it on this street right opposite the depot. I don't remember what I paid for my place in the car. But in reality my bed cost me 75 cents. There used to be a sign on one of those little buildings over there which said:

"Get your straw beds here—50 and 75 cents."

"Twenty-five years ago that meant luxurious traveling. There were simply curtains to pull down over your seat and you provided your own bedding. You took your sheets (if you wished them at all) and your own blankets. Kansas City was looked upon as the supplying point for all western travelers. Those men who owned the straw and the ticks in that room across on the avenue did a flourishing business."

THE GIRL WHO IS GENTLE

Quiet Ways and Movements Show One Possesses Refined and Lovable Temperament.

By the gentle girl is not meant the girl who is gentle in heart and thought, though she should strive to be both, but the girl who is gentle in her movements and in her speech.

She does not knock against chairs as she enters the room, she does not plant down each foot as if she were trying to stamp the pattern out of the carpet.

When she talks and becomes interested in her subject she does not allow her voice to become a shrill tone that is ear-piercing.

Of course none of these things are wicked, but they show a lack of consideration, and suggest that there is a strain in one that does not belong to the refined and lovable temperament.

The girl who is gentle learns to walk as if, to keep her eyes open so that she does not trip over rugs, cushions, chairs, or tables.

The girl who is gentle realizes that a sweet, low voice and a quiet manner are more convincing of the power of womanhood than all the loud talking and blustering imaginable.

BAD WOLVES IN THE WEST

Uncle Sam Makes Study of Them with Deliberate View to Their Extirpation.

Uncle Sam has been making a study of the wolves of this country, not, however, because that particular animal is worthy of preservation, but simply with a view to extermination.

The losses to stockmen and farmers from the depredations of wolves is very great, ranchmen frequently losing ten per cent. of their calves from wolf attacks. Many protective measures have been adopted, such as building wolfproof fences, granting bounties for wolf pelts, direct destruction by hunting, poisoning, trapping, etc.

It appears that the bounty system has not proved very satisfactory and hunting is both expensive of time and labor, so that poisoning is largely resorted to.

The most successful method consists in the use of strychnine, which is inclosed in a gelatin capsule such as is usually employed by the druggist in putting up sundry powdered medicines. These capsules are concealed in pieces of beef suet and are distributed at points likely to be traversed by wolf packs.

BEAUTIFUL VENEZUELA.

The country beautiful in Venezuela. In its perpetual summer he is only half a man who does not for a moment forget the needs of civilization in the intoxication of primitive nature. In the little resort called El Encanto nature seems to have gone mad in her effort to outdo her previous work. But passing westward, where the valley broadens to hold the lake of Valencia, the traveler must cry, "Europe, I can stand no more." Here, the chivalry, kindness, hospitality, traditions, and costumes of old Spain not yet have worn away. To attend the opera in Valencia is to be transported to Italy of the early fifteenth century. The opera is a festival, deliciously old-fashioned, with courtliness of manner, grandiloquence of speech. The people are pronouncedly esthetic, decorate their huts and villas with roses or orchids, and sometimes completely smother their railway stations with blossoms.

GULLS AS LIFESAVERS.

"I wouldn't no more kill a gull than I would a baby," said the sailor. "Why not?" "Because gulls have saved my life, that's why not. Gulls are lifesavers. They've saved the lives of thousands of seamen. They ought to all wear round their sleek white necks a pink silk ribbon with one of them there Andy Carnegie medals tied to it."

"Wunst, off the Orkneys, in a fog, we lost our bearings, and we'd have run aground and drowned sure if the loud screamin' of the gulls on the cliffs hadn't give us timely warnin'."

"So it goes. Time after time, in black, storm nights, in mists and fogs, gulls' cries, as good as any fog horn, warns sailors what has lost their way off deadly coasts."

RECOMMENDED.

"Will you give me a letter of recommendation?" asked Sam, piteously.

Although he felt that he could not conscientiously comply with this request, the Baltimore man's heart was touched by the appeal. So he sat down to his desk to write a non-committal letter of character for the negro.

His effort resulted as follows: "This man, Sam Harkins, has worked for me one week and I am satisfied."—Harper's Weekly.

WHERE HE WAS AHEAD

One Case Where Man Had Made Profitable Investment and Yet Was Disappointed.

Frank Eddy used to have a friend who never was known to stand treat to anything—neither dinner, drinks, cigars, theater nor opera. One day, meeting him by chance, he said earnestly:

"Just the man I want to see, Charley. If you want to make a little money right quick I've got a good investment."

All eagerness, Charley wanted to know everything, but Eddy whispered: "It isn't safe to speak of a matter of this kind in a public street; where can we go and talk privately?"

"Why, let us step into this cafe and have a drink and a chat."

"Good enough." Two whiskies were ordered and disposed of.

"How much?" asked Charley.

"Twenty-five cents," said the bartender.

Having cast down his quarter, Charley said to his friend, "Now, how about that investment?"

"You've already made it, and have the profits in your pocket."

"What do you mean?"

"Well, you always drink alone at 15 cents a drink, two for 30 cents. You and I have just had two drinks for a quarter; therefore, by investing 25 cents you have saved a nickel. Good morning."—New York Press.

JOKE ON THE KHEDEIV.

The Khedive of Egypt was lately entertaining a party of American guests. He spoke to them and to others in English, French and German, and, in the course of a conversation with a young American girl, remarked that it was strange that visitors to Cairo should not take the trouble to learn Arabic before coming to Egypt. "You," for instance," he said, "have not picked up any of our language, have you?" "I can say one or two words," was the reply, on which he requested that he might hear them. Pointing to his pocket, she imitated the whining voice of the Cairo beggars, and said, "Baksheesh, Excellency!" The Khedive was much amused at the audacity of his guest, and entered into the joke. He put his hand into his pocket and produced a golden coin, which he gave to the girl who treasures it as a souvenir of her visit to the land of the Nile.

NOVELTIES IN LANDSCAPE.

"I shall introduce this season," said a landscape gardener, "two novelties on the grounds of a Newport millionaire. One will be a floral clock, the other a revolving flower bed."

"The clock is to be a circle 20 feet in diameter. The face will be of grass, the hands will be red roses, pansies, heliotrope, and so on. This clock will work electrically, and of course the mechanism will be concealed. Will it keep good time? Oh, the best. I made an experimental one last week that only varies 18 seconds a day."

"The revolving beds will be a feature of a sunken garden. There will be four of them, each about 12 feet square, and they will revolve electrically at the rate of a revolution a minute."

"These novelties will be the first motion pictures ever introduced into American landscape gardening."

MEXICAN OYXN FIELDS.

One of the most extensive fields of oyxn in Mexico lies along the border between the states of Durango and Coahuila, beds of this marble having been found recently in the hummocks at the foot of the mountains which fall within the jurisdiction of the Hacienda Jimulco and on both sides of the Aguanavira river. The most important of these marble beds lie west of the Mexican Central railroad, being from Peralta, at the foot of the high range on the way to Cuernavaca. The proximity of the railway and the quantity and beauty of the marble unite two facilities for making these beds of easy exploitation. They are not only extensive, but are important because of their accessibility.

WENT LONG WAY AROUND

Tourist Forced to Adopt Unique Methods to Find Out Where Was His Place of Abode.

A young fellow from the north of England, the unfortunate possessor of a rather treacherous memory, went to spend a holiday in Paris. With a little difficulty he sought out a hotel, and anxious to make the best of his time he sallied forth the next morning to have a look at the boulevards. Having spent a few hours there he would return to his quarters. But to get to the boulevards and then get back to the hotel he soon found were very different things, for to his great annoyance he had utterly forgotten the name of the place where he had taken up his abode.

Further a mere smattering of French was all he knew and as everyone he encountered appeared to have no knowledge of English the difficulty of explaining himself seemed insurmountable. At last, to his great joy, he stumbled across a fellow countryman, who after a little conversation suggested an ingenious escape from his dilemma.

"By the way," said he, "did you send to your people in England any intimation of your safe arrival last evening?"

"Of course I did," was the ready reply. "I wrote to my folk at once as I promised my father I would."

"Then don't you think," remarked the quick-witted Englishman, "that it would be a good idea to wire home and ask them if they have received your letter to let you know your address in Paris?"

Abundant though it seemed at first, it was the only thing to be done, and luckily his letter had been written on hotel paper. He waited patiently in the telegraph office until he received the welcome intelligence which sent him on his way rejoicing.

REASON NAMED.

One day some Americans on a visit to Wales expressed a wish to see a certain old and historic church. The incumbent was only too pleased to show them round, especially as he believed it would end in a donation being given to his parochial funds. He is as proud of the school as he is of the church, and finished up by asking them in there also and inviting them to question the scholars.

One of the party accepted the invitation.

"Can you tell me, little boy," he said to one lad, "who George Washington was?"

"Iss, surr," said he, "he was a 'Merrycan gen'ral'."

"Quite right," said the American. "And can you tell me what George Washington was remarkable for?"

"Iss, surr; 'e was remarkable 'cause 'e was a 'Merrycan an' told the trewth."

The American didn't question further.—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

SOMEWHAT MIXED.

A woman was waiting for her sister in a railway station when a gentleman, looking for his wife, and misled by a general resemblance in figure and clothing, stepped up behind her, and laying his hand on her shoulder, exclaimed:

"Thank goodness, Emma, it's you!"

The name he used happened to be really hers, which made the sudden familiarity even more startling. She jumped nervously.

"You're mistaken, sir!" she gasped. "I'm Emma, but she isn't me."

INDUSTRY OF THE BEE

Little Creature Has to Travel Far to Contribute His Share Toward Pound of Honey.

When you eat a spoonful of honey you have very little notion as to the amount of work and travel necessary to produce it. To make one pound of clover honey bees must deprive 62,000 clover blossoms of their nectar, and to do this requires 2,750,000 visits to the blossoms by the bees.

In other words, one bee to collect enough nectar to make one pound of honey must go from hive to flower and back 2,750,000 times. Then when you think how far these bees sometimes fly in search of these clover fields, often farther than one or two miles from the hive, you will begin to get a small idea of the number of miles one of the industrious little creatures must travel in order that you may have the pound of honey that gives them so much trouble.

It may also help you to understand why the bee is unamiable enough to sting you if you get in its way. When one has to work so hard to accomplish so little, it is quite irritating to be interfered with.—Philadelphia Record.

PAY OF ENGLISH JURORS.

The scale of remuneration of English common juries is absurd. In a civil case in England a common jurymen is allowed five shillings a day for "a view"—that is, for inspecting any property or thing in dispute—but otherwise he is, in law, not entitled to any remuneration.

It is usual, however, in the high court to give him a fee of one shilling, and in the counties eight pence. Special juries receive much higher remuneration. The fee in the county court is one shilling a case, in the mayor's court two pence and in the London sheriff's court four pence.

But English juries have been accorded some highly important privileges. The act of 1870 lays it down that they may, in the discretion of the judge, be allowed the use of a fire when not in court, and may also be allowed "reasonable refreshments, at their own expense."

COWS HAVE TO WEAR GLASSES.

"There are cows that wear glasses in my country," said a Russian. "I once saw a herd of 40,000 cows with glasses on."

"It was on the steppes, the great Russian prairies. Our steppes for six miles in the year are covered with snow, but during a part of the time delicate, fresh grass tips protrude from that white and dazzling mantle. The cows then are turned out to feed on the new grass, but if their eyes are unprotected the dazzle of sunshine on the snow gives them snow blindness."

"Thousands of cows suffered horribly and hundreds died of snow blindness until a rude, cheap kind of spectacles, made of leather and smoked glass, was invented and put with great success on the Russian market."

Crime Must Stop.

The grand jury now in session is made up of good men in every respect, men who we believe will indict every lawbreaker brought before them, high or low. We hope they will make a special effort to indict the dastards who destroyed widow Woolsey's poor little plant beds the other night. When men who prowl around in the night time, making warfare on women and children are allowed to go unpunished, our very civilization is endangered. Such a condition of affairs existed in this county in 1845 and for a while a reign of terror prevailed. But finally there came to the front leaders who did what the law failed to do, made up a case against the chief criminal and brought him to the gallows. Night riding was stopped in 1845 and it can be stopped in 1907. It cannot be done by allowing suspected parties to conduct a defense at the grand jury room. The court room is the place for that, and there are counties where a change of venue is absolutely necessary to convict the guilty parties after they are indicted. Years ago a man in this county burned his neighbor's barn and one of the most terrific arraignments of a criminal ever heard in the Hopkinsville court house was an B. Garnett's speech that landed the guilty wretch in the penitentiary. The evidence purely circumstantial. The barn burners and planted trappers are no better than the man who destroyed Jim Lander's barn cars ago. There is strong circumstantial evidence against certain parties. The attack on poor Mrs. Woolsey, it is said, was a fulfillment of threats made less than a week before. This case is one of the meanest of all the cases of crime. Gentlemen of the grand jury, here is a crime committed while you are in session, in sight most of the homes of some of you. Garnett is not in office now, but he has an able townsman who is, and

Christian County has as his assistant, John C. Duffy, whose ability, courage and regard for duty are unquestioned. Mr. Smith, it is easy to find out who made threats. Mr. Duffy, Christian County is looking to you also. As Lord Nelson said, "England expects every man to do his duty."

Every once in a while the editor of this paper gets an anonymous letter written on a typewriter and mailed at Cadiz, giving solemn warnings and making dire threats. The last one was mailed on May 29, threatening all sorts of calamities from "fire" to "open grave," unless we reprinted "every word" of an article to appear in the Cadiz paper the next day, on the Mott Ayres matter. The letter contained more or less profanity and the writer used some language very characteristic. The party who entertains such a poor opinion of the editor of the Kentuckian as to suppose that threats of this kind would deter him from publishing the news, or force him to rehandle stuff from a paper endorsed by night riders, evidently intends to reflect upon his intelligence. By-the-way, the writer of these letters knows how to disguise himself about as well as an ostrich knows how to hide by sticking his head in the sand.

The women of Omaha have started a movement to force merchants to remove false legs from their show windows as hosiery advertisements. The city officials are treating the matter as a joke, but the ladies seem to be very much in earnest. Wonder if those ladies ever patronize the bathing resort at Lake Manawa, close to Omaha? The kind you see there are not made of plaster of paris.

A Card.

TO MY FRIENDS IN THE THIRD WARD
I wish to assure you, one and all, of my grateful appreciation of your hearty support and invaluable assistance during my incumbency of the office of Councilman from the Third ward. It has been a great pride and pleasure for me to serve you to the best of my ability. I desire herewith to announce that on account of business matters which require my entire attention, I shall not be a candidate for re-election. So many have proffered me their support and asked if I would be a candidate, that I feel I should publicly make known my intentions at this time. Respectfully,
J. K. TWYMAN.

Judge to Resign.

Judge J. Flem Gordon, it is said, will shortly resign as circuit judge of the fourth district and move to Paducah. There are already two candidates for the prospective vacancy. Lee Gibbons, of Hopkins, and Jno. W. Blue, of Crittenden.

READJUSTMENT OF SALARIES

Of Kentucky Postmasters, and a Number of Increases Are Made.

The Postoffice Department has announced the annual readjustment of salaries of Kentucky postmasters. Under the order a large number of these officials will have their salaries increased beginning July 1, with the next fiscal year, as a result of increased receipts in their offices during the present year. Some few will have their compensation reduced.

The readjustment is out this year earlier than ever before by a couple of weeks, owing to the industrious efforts of First Assistant Postmaster General Hiram C. Cook. The details of the changes in Kentucky postmaster salaries are as follows:

AGED WOMAN

Passes Away After a Long Illness.

Mrs. Malinda Crabtree, aged ninety years, died Wednesday, at the home of her son-in-law, Mr. J. H. Lutz, a few miles south of the city. She had been ill for some time with a complication of diseases, but pneumonia was the immediate cause of death. She was a member of the Christian church. The deceased is survived by three children. The remains were interred in the family burying ground, near St. Charles, Hopkins county, Thursday.

A Real Wonderland.

South Dakota, which is rich silver mines, bonanza farms, wide ranges and strange natural formations, is a veritable wonderland. At Mound City, in the home of Mrs. E. D. SIG SUM

Being Offered by State Board of Agriculture.

Twenty-five thousand dollars is being offered by the State Board of Agriculture in premiums and purses for the Kentucky State Fair to be held at Louisville, Sept. 16-21. The State Fair offers to the breeder of all classes of live stock an excellent opportunity to bring his stock to the public's attention in a way that no other occasion offers. If he is hunting a purchaser, he will find at the Kentucky State Fair many persons in the market for just such stock as he may wish to show and sell. He, therefore, stands the chance of getting premiums as well as a better price for his stock.

A WOMAN'S BACK

The Aches and Pains Will Disappear if the Advice of This Hopkinsville Citizen is Followed.

A woman's back has many aches and pains. Most times 'tis the kidney's fault. Backache is really kidney ache; that's why Doan's Kidney Pills cure it. Many Hopkinsville women know this. Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. John Coombs, 1226 South Virginia street, Hopkinsville, Ky., says: "For a great many years I suffered from a persistent aching across my loins and through my kidneys. At times my back was so bad I could hardly turn in bed; I could not lie on my back without putting my hand under it, for in this way it seemed to relieve the pain. A friend of Mr. Coombs told him about Doan's Kidney Pills and he got a box for me at L. A. Johnson & Co's drug store. On using them, I steadily improved until the dreadful aching was relieved and I could attend to my household duties without inconvenience. Doan's Kidney Pills did more for me than any other medicine I ever used, and I heartily recommend them."

Norfolk, Va., June 7.—Two addresses by Theodore Roosevelt, a magnificent naval demonstration in Hampton Roads, the presentation of a silver service to the battleship Georgia, a military escort for the President, to be composed of Georgia troops, Virginia cadets, and West Point and Annapolis cadets, and a reception to the President by the Georgia commission at "Bulloch Hall," the Georgia State Building, are the main features of the celebration of "Georgia Day," June 10th, at the Jamestown Exposition.

Mr. Randle a Candidate.

Mr. Geo. Randle is announced as a candidate for councilman in the Sixth ward, subject to the action of the Democratic primary, July 22. Dr. J. B. Jackson, the present councilman, has decided not to be a candidate for re-election, and Mr. Randle will receive the support of his friends. His long service as chief of the fire department and his fine qualities as a business man have made him universally popular, not only in his ward but all over the city. His nomination is liable to come to him without opposition.

A. S. OF E.

The A. S. of E. has formed a district union, embracing Christian and adjoining counties, and the executive committee will hereafter look after the warehousing and selling tobacco of the organization. After sale is made of the weed the various parties can collect the amount coming to them.

INJURED MEN

Getting Along Nicely in the Nashville Hospital.

In the railroad accident which occurred 3½ miles from Lebanon, Tenn., Wednesday morning, in which four persons were seriously injured and fourteen slightly. Two Hopkinsville people were among the latter class. They were Messrs. C. T. Phillips and Henderson Denton. Mr. Denton is a brother to Mrs. J. W. Overby and Mr. Phillips is her half brother.

For a short time Mr. Phillips has been living in Onalaska, Kansas, and had been visiting his sister here. At the time of the accident he was on his way with Mr. Denton to visit relatives in some part of Tennessee. Neither of them were injured seriously, but both of them sustained painful cuts on the head. Thursday Mrs. Overby was called up from Nashville and told that they were in a hospital there and getting along nicely. They expect to be able to travel in a few days.

Blaine—Dawson.

Mr. W. B. Blaine, a well known Pee Dee farmer, and Miss Bettie Dawson, daughter of Mr. Gus Dawson, of the same neighborhood, were united in marriage Thursday. The happy event occurred at the home of the bride's parents and was a quiet affair, only a few of the many friends of the couple being present. Mr. and Mrs. Dawson will reside a few miles west of Pee Dee.

EAST VIRGINIA INDIANS.

The only vestige of remaining Indian blood which can be identified with any degree of certainty is that of two small reservations in King William county, and these are considerably more negro than Indian. The larger band numbers 120, and they call themselves Pamunkies; the smaller numbers about 50, and they call themselves Mattaponies. They are both governed by chiefs and councilors, together with a band of white trustees chosen by themselves. That they can lay some claim to being descendants of Powhatan may be inferred from Thomas Jefferson's reference to the Mattaponies and Pamunkies still occupying in 1878 small holdings in King William county, on the streams bearing their names. — Bulletin of America.

Why She Refused

By Tom Mansson

(Copyright, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

He reached forward, and took her hand in his. For a moment it seemed to him only an instant of time, but it was just long enough to convey its own meaning—she allowed it to remain. Then she withdrew it.

He was a wise young man. If he had attempted to pursue even this infinitesimal advantage, and to reach forward again, doubtless he would have been rebuffed in that queenly manner which the occasion she could so easily command.

And so he was content to wait, and change the subject.

It is proper to state, however, that the new subject was more in line with his real train of thought than the old. They had, when he made his advance, been talking on the commonplace topic of the latest historical novel.

Now he turned slowly, and looked her squarely in the eye.

"I'm going to marry you," he said. "Are you indeed?" "When did you make up your mind to that?"

"Oh, some time ago. I mean it, you know."

"And lose a million?"

He turned again, abruptly.

"How did you know anything about that?" he asked.

"Your father told me."

"When?"

"Oh, some time ago. He called."

"Why, you must have known them—"

"That you wanted to marry me? No, I didn't. All I knew was that you had spoken to my father about it. You know you might have changed your mind—afterward."

He smiled grimly.

"What you mean," he said, "is this: that I thought I had to consult the governor first, and find out where I stood with him, before I found out where I stood with you."

"Yes."

He got up and took a turn around the room.

"Well, that wasn't exactly it," he continued. "You see, I had had my doubts about marrying you. I wouldn't have done that—I would have gone for you first, and let the rest go. I meant business, and I thought I ought to do things right. Besides, I said to myself: 'If the old man turns me down, then my conscience is clear.'"

She apparently unheeded the last part of his remark.

"May I ask," she said, "what made you so sure of me?"

"I wasn't. But I was sure of myself. I knew the girl I wanted. That is everything in love."

"You seem to have gotten very wise all of a sudden."

He grasped the top of the burled high-backed chair, and leaped against it hard, as he looked into her eyes.

"I've knocked around some," he said. "Since I've left college, I've run with the Newport crowd and the girls thrown my way, but I wouldn't give a white chip for the whole lot. I've seen them at their best and worst. They're all right—some of them. It's the life I don't fancy. I don't care for the pace."

It was her turn to smile.

"But there's nothing about me," she said, "that ought to specially recommend itself to you. Why, I even have to earn my own living."

"But your grandmother didn't die?"

"Why, no, I suppose not. She was a widow."

"Well, mine did. I've heard the governor tell the story. So what's the difference? A few years of time won't hurt a young man or woman."

She opened her eyes rather wide.

"You seem to have taken on such a sudden weight of accumulated philosophy," she said. "That I hardly recognize you. Where's Jack Wakelind, member of 20 clubs; the great polo player, the howling swell? That sort of fellow doesn't go with such depth as this."

"Can't a man do that sort of thing, and still be a man?"

"Why, of course; but they don't go together as a rule."

"Well, maybe you did that for me, or maybe the governor got mad. I don't know which. He's lived so much by himself, of late years, that the old fellow is crabbed, I guess. But he did turn me down hard."

"What did he say?"

"I don't know that I can rehearse it all—it was some time ago. But the main point was that, if I married you, he'd disinherit me. My allowance would continue, but not more. I should have gone direct to you to make a sure thing of it, didn't he?"

She turned her head slowly, and looked far away out of the dingy window, beyond the street, past the whirl of the great town, into the unknown distance.

"Yes," she said, "several times. He doesn't want you to marry me. Not a bit."

"Well, it doesn't make any difference to me whether he does or not. I can go out and hustle for myself. Money isn't everything."

The boarding-house bell rang—not an unusual occurrence. Outside there was the low snorting of an automobile.

He drew nearer to her. Again he took her hand.

"Helen, dear," he said, "what's the answer?"

"I cannot marry you, a tear."

"I cannot marry you," she said.

"You're too good for me."

He laughed, a spontaneous, hearty laugh.

"That's a good joke," he said. "You know me, but look here! Let's be honest with each other. I've had slanders of money, and there's nothing in it. Why spoil the game just because of a paltry million? I tell you, it's all right. I assure you, I'll never mention the matter again. We can live."

She shook her head.

"I cannot marry you," she said.

"You don't love anyone else, do you?"

There was no answer.

"I know what it is," he said. "It's your pride. Never mind! I can wait. Of course, it's embarrassing for you. You don't care anything about the money, of course, but your conscience troubles you about my losing it—naturally. Well, never mind. I'll

INLAND WATERWAY

Eighteen Thousand Mile Route Soon to Be Ready.

Will Take Eighteen Months' Steady Travel by Canal to Go from Pittsburg to Brownsville, Tex.

The last congress appropriated $600,000 for the completion of the great inland waterway in the world. It is 18,000 miles long and extends from the waterways in New York and Pennsylvania down through the Ohio and Mississippi rivers into the Gulf where connection is made with the intercoastal canal from New Orleans to Brownsville, Tex. This great inland waterway is just being completed, and runs through the Gulf coast country of Louisiana and Texas. With the possible exception of the railroad extensions being laid through this remarkable country the canal is the most important public work in the whole southwest. It is about 5000 miles long, running from Donaldsonville on the Mississippi river a few miles above New Orleans to Brownsville, Tex., on the Rio Grande, at the most southerly point of the United States west of the tip of Florida peninsula. Of this 5000 miles there are less than 250 miles to be dug, the rest following the course of the through channels of bays and rivers already navigable.

The appropriation just made by congress in the rivers and harbors bill will not

JENKINS WON

In the Wrestling Match at the Armory Thursday Night.

Vastik Injured in the Third Bout and Game Was Forfeited.

Billy Jenkins was given the decision in the wrestling match with Karl Vastik at the armory Thursday night. Jenkins was the first fall and Vastik the second. In the third Vastik got his ankle sprained so badly that he was unable to come to time when the two minutes was up and the match was forfeited to his opponent. More than a hundred people witnessed the match and the gate receipts amounted to $55, three-fourths of which went to the winner and one-fourth to Company D. A purse of about $15 was made up and presented to the loser. Vastik lives in Cincinnati and he left for his home yesterday morning. Another wrestling will take place at the armory, under the auspices of Company D, in about two weeks.

INDEPENDENT PHONES.

Association Begins Convention at Chicago.

Chicago, June 4.—During the past year 2,642 new companies were added to the records of the International Independent Telephone Association, according to the reports of Secretary James A. Harney. This makes a total of 10,042 independent companies operating in over 10,000 cities and towns, controlled by the association.

The annual convention of the association is being held in Chicago with over 600 delegates present from all parts of the country. Several addresses were made at today's session showing the rapid growth of the organization in the various sections.

Pot-Pourri

Automobile Parties—Politeness Rewarded—Going to the Gold Fields—High Coal, etc., etc.

It is said that the blackberry crop will be unusually large this year.

Wheat harvesting will commence in about two weeks.

Auto parties are liable to become a fad before many weeks. A party chartered an auto and went up to Elkton Thursday.

Overcoats and wraps were again in demand Thursday morning and some people were asking if there was any frost—June 6th!

Spring chickens are selling all the way from 25c to 40c each. Pretty high for a poor man, but fortunately it is the poor man, as a rule, who does the raising.

Hopkinsville certainly needs a music house—we mean a house where all kinds of instruments, as well as sheet music and the like are kept, and we may have it by the end of the year.

Now that nearly all the fence is down in the rear of the courthouse, why not take down the iron one on the south side of the temple of justice? What an improvement it would be.

As the pike to the coal mines cannot be built before bad weather and the scheme to build an electric line to the mines has played out, it is reasonable to suppose that coal will be high again next winter.

It would be well if the town man could get into the notion of emulating the man with the hoe, who is scraping his neighbor's plant bed, and cut the weeds off the pavement of his next door neighbor. That kind of anarchism would meet with general approval.

We are willing to let those stone posts remain, which have been left standing for 45 years, through deference to the wishes of Postmaster Breathitt, if the fiscal court will sell and remove the useless iron fence on the south side of the courthouse.

The anti-whiskey element of Bowling Green made a free use of printer's ink to carry the day Thursday. Monday's issue of the Park City News contained the names of 941 ladies of the city calling upon the merchants to vote for stopping the sale of whiskey.

Judging from the farming machinery that is being delivered at the railroad stations there will be something raised on the farm this year. Every day wagons loaded with harvesting machines, twine, etc., and traction engines are often seen on their way to the country.

Was it just because the newspaper men of the city wouldn't bid on the $100,000 in county bonds that a Chicago bank failed to come to terms with the fiscal court and left the city? Virtue may always have its own reward, but the fellow that is continually forgetting self and looking out for others generally gets left.

Forest Zimmer, who has been playing leading roles on the stage for several years, will not spend the summer with his parents this year. He has the gold fever and is thinking of going to Colorado and engaging in gold mining. Everybody will wish that he may "strike it rich."

It pays sometimes, if not always, to be polite. A young man gave an old lady a seat in a street car in Chicago. When the lady died the young man found that she had willed him $10,000. The young men of Hopkinsville may not live long enough to try their politeness on street cars, but they can at least make room on the street corners for the ladies to pass.

Open air concerts are plentiful and inexpensive, since the moving picture shows are the rage. You can stand at Ninth and Main and hear music from three phonographs at one time. If you don't like rag-time music, you can listen to a sweet old melody or an operatic gem all at the same time. Or you can have a banjo solo, if you prefer it.

She may have grown pale and attenuated by overstudy at school and wants to "rest" awhile, and she may look too frail to sweep the front porch. But it is a little strange how she can picnic one day, play tennis the next and beat everything on the floor of the rink at night without being fagged out. "Consistency, thou art a jewel!"—that but few possess.

BARGAINS

In Good Christian County Farms.

60 acres, only 4 1-2 miles south of Hopkinsville on good turnpike. Beautiful little farm—high and rolling with new house and other good outbuildings. Would make a fine poultry or dairy site. Numerous advantages. Must be seen to be appreciated. If taken soon only $2,500.

310 acres near Pee Dee, good dwelling, tobacco barn to hold 20 acres, large stable, three cabins and other outbuildings. This is good productive land and a splendid bargain for somebody. Price $25.00 per acre.

228 acres, fine stock and grain farm within one mile of Hopkinsville. An ideal home, strictly modern 8 room house, with all the conveniences of a modern city house, long distant telephone and water works; all improvements in perfect condition. Great opportunity to buy the most desirable country home in this part of the state.

225 acres near Herndon, Ky. A six room house and all kinds of outbuildings, in good repair. A good farm and a money maker at the low price of $5,000.

71 1-2 acres, well improved, in Church Hill neighborhood, which means something. Choice and can be had for the small sum of $2,000.

282 acres near Pembroke, Ky. The richest and most productive farm in Christian County. Well improved, in a splendid neighborhood and within a mile of the best little town on earth. This is really a rare opportunity to get a bargain. Price $50 per acre.

PLANTERS BANK & TRUST CO.

Press Comments.

The lawlessness in Western Kentucky has reached a point where incendiaries and outlaws have apparently lost all fear of punishment by the court. From the outset they have shown neither regard for the law nor respect for the good name of the State. It is possible that some of the reports from that section of the State may have been exaggerated. It is not possible that all of them have been manufactured from the whole cloth. There is, and has for some time existed, in Western Kentucky a conspiracy for the destruction of property and the intimidation of citizens and communities.

The conspiracy appears to be too widespread to be successfully dealt with by the use of troops, and the one hope of putting an end to its operations lies with the courts.—Louisville Times.

It was not believed there lived within the borders of Simpson county a man who had sunk so low in the scale of human degradation as to be capable of so mean and despicable an act as that of destroying a neighbor's plant bed. And westill hope there is not, but that the sneak crept in from some other county. But be that as it may the plant bed of Mr. John Barrett, who lives between Gold City and Temperance, was practically ruined some time between last Wednesday morning and Thursday morning.—Franklin Favorite.

The tobacco men are doing themselves and their cause great harm. They have the sympathy and good wishes of the public in their fight against oppression, and they should not lose it by resorting to such acts as burning trust companies' warehouses and destroying the tobacco beds of those who will not join their association. None but cowards and criminals operate in the night time and in masks and such marauders should be run down and landed in the penitentiary. The tobacco men can win their fight without resort to lawlessness and the leaders should frown upon any deviation from the right course. Anarchy must not be permitted to prevail in Kentucky.—State Journal.

The association of tobacco growers has a useful purpose to serve in combating the vicious actions of the all-powerful trust, which has steadily hammered down the prices of tobacco leaf until the growers have found it difficult to make a profit on their crops. Praiseworthy objects, however, do not justify lawless means. The resort to anarchy either to keep growers out of the association or to force them into it is malign and despicable. Not only the integrity of the law but the most superficial demand an end to the reign of the anarchists.—Courier Journal.
